

Free

Umpqua Community College student publication

The Mainstream

June 1, 2016

mainstreamonline.org

Vol. 42, Issue 11

Go confidently in the direction of your dreams. Live the life you have imagined - Henry David Thoreau

I am UCC Athletic director retiring after 30 years

DUSTIN BARNEBURG
for The Mainstream

Walking into Cheryl Yoder's office can be a bit overwhelming. Thirty years of Umpqua Community College history surrounds you on all sides. Framed photographs of countless faces, representing decades of memories, line and dot nearly every inch of her office.

Yoder, UCC's athletic director, seems apprehensive about having to clear her office walls which are covered in the moments that meant so much during her three decades at Umpqua — not because of the amount of actual time she knows it's going to take her, but because it means she is saying goodbye.

"I just love Douglas County. I love the college. This was the perfect job and a great place to raise kids."
-Cheryl Yoder

After 30 years, UCC's longtime athletic director, coach and educator has announced her plans to retire at the end of the school year.

"I've been teaching for almost 40 years, and when you think about how all of the sudden you're not going to be teaching, it's tough," Yoder said. "It's going to be a big lifestyle change. It's bittersweet; I love the interaction with students, and I love just being around the students. That's why I never moved up into administration. That is something I'm really going to miss. I'm just ready. My body is ready, and my mind is ready."

In 1986, UCC President James Kraby hired Yoder full-time, fulfilling a number of needs on campus. In addition to being a faculty member, Yoder worked as the summer recreation director in charge of all aquatic activities at the college. She also took over coaching responsibilities of the women's volleyball team, a sport Yoder was familiar with before coming to UCC.

Yoder coached two seasons at Northern Arizona University as part of her graduate program; she also spent a year at Corona Del Mar High School and three more at Lane Community College before landing at Umpqua. Coaching is something that left an indelible mark on Yoder during her time at the college.

"I miss the athletes," Yoder said. "As a coach, you have the ability to really create bonding memories with your athletes that are forever."

With a quick smile, Yoder recalls how she always seemed to find herself in trouble so-to-speak with Kraby during her early years at UCC.

"He (Kraby) could be tough," Yoder said. "After every game, he was my first phone call. Not to the media, but to him. And if you lost that night, he wanted to know why."

On her first road trip as UCC's volleyball coach, Yoder lost the bank bag that housed all of the money needed for the trip. Thirty years later she laughs, but she still cringes about the plight she put herself in.

"I was always in trouble with him," Yoder said. "I was young and just kind of a renegade, I think. I'm surprised I didn't get fired."

There is little doubt, however, that Yoder was doing something right since she continued coaching women's volleyball for 16 straight seasons.

"When I first got this job, I thought, 'Oh, maybe I'll be here for a few years and move on,' but I never did," Yoder said. "I just love Douglas County. I love the college. This was the perfect job and a great place to raise kids."

UCC also ended up providing her with the opportunity to meet the love of her life, Dan Yoder. In 1993, Cheryl began dating Dan while he was the IT department's senior program analyst. In September 1996, the two were married.

"Jacky Hagan, our former vice president, used to say we were UCC sweethearts," Yoder said. "It's nice to have someone to bounce work stuff off of at home after a long day. But, we don't just drag on about it."

Twenty years later, Dan Yoder offers perspective on the family the college has provided him.

"Our professional careers do not have many points of contact. Because of UCC, we developed a friendship that led us to where we are today. I don't think there would have been a chance of us ending up together without this college," Dan Yoder said.

Two years after retiring as UCC's volleyball coach, Yoder was hired as athletic director, a position she's held for the past 12 years. While the college has experienced a number of administrative changes over the past decade, the athletic department boasts some of the college's longest tenured employees. Yoder, Rod Snook and Dave Stricklin provide a combined 82 years of experience in athletics. With 22 years coaching women's basketball, the short-timer of the group is Stricklin. He reflects on what Yoder has meant to the athletic department.

"Athletics are constantly changing," Stricklin said. "Dealing with young athletes, it changes day-to-day; it can be a rollercoaster. With this department, there has been some continuity. During my time here, we've seen such an influx of administration. Anytime someone new comes in, they have somewhat of their own way of doing things. Sometimes it's major changes, sometimes it's minor changes, but there always is something different. She's had to always adjust to that, so I don't know how many presidents or administrators. While our department has had that continuity, there hasn't been that elsewhere on the campus at times, and she has certainly done a great job of keeping us intact."

As athletic director, Yoder has been proud to watch a number of programs flourish, notably, the creation of the weight room's Fitness Tech program, providing a one-year certificate for personal trainers. She has also watched over the continued growth of the school's many outdoor programs. However, there are projects Yoder wishes she could have seen come to fruition.

"I really wanted to get baseball and softball going," Yoder said.

Dustin Barneburg/ Mainstream Alumnus

Athletic Director Cheryl Yoder is retiring after 30 years at UCC. Yoder also filled the roles of educator and coach. She has inspired many during her time here. Now, Yoder plans to begin a new chapter.

"I kept saying, 'I'm going to die before I'll let that go.' I'll still push it. There has been some pressure in the community. I think financially some people don't think it's the right time. But I disagree. I think adding sports brings students, FTE (full-time enrollments) and tuition to the college. What other programs can bring 50 to 75 students right now on campus? We are one of the few."

While there is no indication that baseball and softball programs will be added at UCC in the immediate future, the prospect of adding the sports falls on the lap of the new athletic director to champion. Applicants for the new position have not been gathered at this time.

"I don't know if I can offer any advice to my replacement," Yoder said. "I would say really spend time making community connections. Spend time in the community because these are the people who are going to support your program."

With Aug. 31 slated as Yoder's last official day at Umpqua, Yoder will soon start what she calls "phase two" of her life, closing a 30 year chapter, only to start a new one. Many of her colleagues reflected on how much she would be missed.

"Cheryl is someone that everybody loves on this campus," UCC men's basketball coach Daniel Leeworthy said. "Everyone respects her, and she is a friend to everyone. Her opinion definitely matters at this school. To me it's more than that. She has been welcoming and been a friend to me and my family ever since I got here. Even though she is from California, she is what I call the true definition of an Oregonian. She loves this area, loves Douglas County and has given her heart and soul to this campus." •

Find all the graduation caps throughout the newspaper.

THE MAINSTREAM

MANAGING EDITOR:
Alicia Graves

DESIGN EDITOR:
Kayla Towers

WEB EDITOR:
Casey Conemac

WEBSITE SUPPORT:
Casey Conemac

SENIOR REPORTER:
Vaughn Kness
Brandon Taylor

REPORTERS:

Alicia Graves,
Brandon Taylor
Farrah Kincheloe
Trick Schneider
Haylie Ellison
Vladimir Sovyak

PHOTOGRAPHER:
Brandon Taylor

OFFICE ADMINISTRATOR:
Trick Schneider

VIDEOGRAPHER:
Brandon Taylor

DESIGNER:
Kayla Towers
Kimberly Phinney

ADVISER:
Melinda Benton

SUBMISSIONS

The Mainstream is an award-winning member of the Oregon Newspaper Publishing Association. Guest articles are welcomed but see mission statement for additional submission information. All copy is due every other Tuesday.

MISSION STATEMENT

The Mainstream is a designated student forum written to promote the activities, events, and interests of UCC. Its primary focus is on hard news relating to campus events or personnel, especially as students are affected, but features, art work and poetry may be accepted. Any opinions or art presented in The Mainstream do not represent the viewpoint of this newspaper or UCC.

CONTACT

PO Box 976
Roseburg, OR 97470
(541) 440-4687
uccmainstream@yahoo.com
www.twitter.com/UCC_Mainstream www.facebook.com/uccmainstream

You're off to great places! Today is your day! Your mountain is waiting, so get on your way! — Dr. Seuss

The Mainstream wins 11 awards in tumultuous year

VLADIMIR SOVYAK
The Mainstream

The Mainstream journalism staff broke its own record for awards with this year's wins. The staff took home 11 awards topping the previous UCC record of nine awards for journalism.

These awards were earned for stories published from May 2105 to February 2016 in the state competition sponsored by the Oregon Newspapers Foundation. Annually, ONF runs the Collegiate Newspaper Contest, a competition for all college and university newspapers in Oregon. UCC competes in Division 3, specifically for all state community colleges.

"It's hard to keep writing about something that affects you personally"
-Alicia Graves

The Mainstream competes against community colleges with larger student bodies often with significantly more funding. "This year's wins are exceptional, not only because of the level of competition, but also because of the many challenges we faced this year: our emergency communications related to Oct. 1, the dark topics we had to cover, being a liaison for students' concerns all year, staff turnover, and a substantially increased workload with budget cuts. I couldn't be prouder of this staff and what they accomplished together," detailed Melinda Benton, The Mainstream adviser.

Awards were presented at the University of Oregon May 13, 2016, at the ONF Collegiate Day.

The Mainstream staff and adviser also presented a panel discussion on covering the events of Oct. 1 to state collegiate journalists and their advisers.

The past year has been tumultuous for the staff. "Stepping in to a role that I didn't expect to be in after only writing for the paper for one term was very unusual," recounts Alicia Graves, the current editor of The Mainstream. "We put out the first issue the first week back to school after Oct. 1; our previous editor had a very hard time and had to step down. At the same time, we were trying to keep the family, The Mainstream family, from falling apart," Graves said.

"It's been a rollercoaster of a year. My health took an extreme turn and continues to be a constant struggle. There are many heavy decisions that I have to make, often without the staff even knowing about them," Graves confided. Graves functioned as both a student and a publication editor while she was trying to move on with her own life after Oct. 1.

Vaughn Kness, a senior reporter for The Mainstream added, "It's hard to keep writing about something that affects you personally, and to have to keep revisiting that."

Graves will continue working in journalism. "I plan on going to the UO for my bachelor's and hopefully continue at UC Berkeley for my master's. I would ultimately like to work for an entity like Time, National Geographic, or for the Center for Investigative Reporting," Graves said.

For Graves, bringing public awareness to pertinent but underreported topics is a significant part of what makes journalism most rewarding for her. "There have been stories that we have reported on this year that have enacted change. Hearing that we provided someone with information that they needed made everything worthwhile," Graves stated.

Brandon Taylor/ Mainstream

Vaughn Kness shows off all his awards. He won four for his stories.

Graves is motivated by her fellow staff. "Seeing the growth of the staff members I have been working with, seeing them get recognized for their efforts through recent awards is rewarding," Graves said.

Vaughn Kness went home with four awards for his writing. Two of these awards were first place in state recognitions. "I have been writing since I was six or seven. I'm still not as good at it as I should be. It's a constant challenge to the mind. To be able to create and use things to influence people and affect them has been something I have always enjoyed," Kness said.

Kness had to considerably change his writing style when first reporting. "The first year I didn't exactly know how to write for journalism. I was more used to writing in a creative style, in flowery language. I had to change my writing style to a journalism format," Kness added.

Kayla Towers/ Mainstream

Design Editor Kayla Towers takes a selfie with other staff members.

However, Kness overcame this stylistic obstacle. "I chose topics that were close to me, movie reviews, art and poetry. As time went on, I then learned how to write for a newspaper by working on the format of lead sentences, transitions and removing the frou-frou language," he continued.

Kness is particularly keen on writing more reviews for journalism. "I have shot scenes. I have written scenes. When I can take that to the newspaper, that is really relaxing," stated Kness.

Like Graves, Kness is also looking to continue journalism as a career. "I saw journalism as a form of writing that I could actually make money off of as compared to other forms of writing," said Kness.

Kimberly Phinney/ Mainstream

The Mainstream managing editor is Alicia Graves.

Collegiate Day Awards:

- First Place for Best Sports Story
Dustin Barneburg
- First Place for Best Writing
Vaughn Kness
- First Place for Best Feature Story
Cassie Bauer
- First Place for Best Editorial
Vaughn Kness
- Second Place for Best News Story
Vaughn Kness
- Second Place for Best Sports Photo
Amy Risinger
- Second Place for Best Review
Vaughn Kness
- Second Place for Best Editorial
The Mainstream (staff)
- Third Place for Best Feature Story
Jacob Lebel
- Third Place for Best Sports Photo
Hannah Hawkins

I'm still paying off my student loans...

What are student loans?

Kayla Towers

Associate of Arts Oregon Transfer

Jennifer Noel Abel
Christina Marie Anderson
Kellie N. Anderson
Julie Lynne Arnold
Gabrielle Leeann Arts
Anne Marie Austin
Maria G. Aviles
Gerardo Aviles-Leon
Tabatha Sky Baker
Stacya C. Baker
Tresa Lee Ballard
Chad Joseph Bebeau
Lindsey Marie Birch
Shasteal Nicole Bogdanoff
Deanna Marie Boyd
Kristen Marie Brady
Theodora Daine Brooks
Summer A Brown
Brittany Ann Brown
Tayler Anne Bruder
Garrett Lee Burris
Shannon McCarron Caley
Delanie Jade Cantrell
Sandra D. Cantrell
David Bradley Capelle
Courtney Marie Case
Christina M. Chamberlain
Jeremy Michael Changala
MaKenzie Dawn Chapman
Mikaela J. Chasteen
Hugo Aldair Chavez
Cody R.L. Clark
Candi Lynn Clark
McKala Jean Coffel
LaRae Amanda Coil
Jubilee M. Conner
Ryan Neill Cook
Daniele Rene' Cooper
Bridgett Ann Cowan
Samuel David Crawford
Heather Elizabeth Crittenden
Alicia Crockett
Kierstin N. Darby
Jasmyne Davis
Erin Ione Davis
Nicolas Govani De Santiago
Michael C. Dixon
Abby Ann Dooley
Jasmine Regina Pascua DuBose
Haley Claire Duncan
Haley A. Egger
Wesley Jackson Elefritz
Ashley Christina Elias

Chloe Jayne Chambers
Joshua James Enloe
Kayla Marie Epperly
Michelle J. Epps
Jedikon Travis Erickson-Good
Angelina Marie Esper
Michelle Suzanne Evans
Alexa Nichelle Evans
Myles Jordan Feral
Oswald J. Fett
Ashley Nichole Figueroa
Alexander Danger Adventure Fitzhugh
Douglas Lee Floyd
Nick J. Foley
Rebecca Mae Foster
Emily Sue Fowler
Ashlee Marie Fox
Tessa Leigh Franklin
David Fregoso
Joshua Duane Friedlein
Graciela Iris Garcia
Dylan R. Garoutte
Katherine Ann Garrido
Whitney Nicole Gasner
Madeline Mae Gidcumb
Jamie Marie Glen
Saige Reann Gombart
Sara Marie Gordon
Mikayla Taylor Groothuis
James L. Gugel
Teresita Carolina Guzman Nader
Mark D. Hamel
Tami L. Hansen
Cody Johnathon Hansen
Kisha Leigh Harp
Nicholas James Harvey
Adrianna Marie Hollman
Blayke I. Hosford
Rachel Rose Hukel
Josie Nicole Humbert
Cristi Ann Hunsaker
Austin Steven Hunt
Shaunta Lenae Jackson
Debra Lee Jensen
Erin Kristine Kelley
Farrah Jean Kincheloe
Sawyer Jane Kluge
Vaughn Allen Kness
Kimberlee Alyse Krewson
Jake Ira LaCrosse
Janika, Elisa, Lamar, Lanning
Eriann Marie Lanning
Riley James Thomas Lavin
Jacob Lebel
Hannah Frances Lee
Cheyanne Renee LeFevre
Michael J. Lewis

Colette F. Lynch-Sajo
Emily Ann Lytle
Veronica Lynn Mackenzie
Hope Ann Maio
Tonya L. Marino
Robert T. Martin Jr.
Erin D. McKinney
Rebecca Anne Miles
Kaylee Maureen Milholland
Ashley Renee Miller
Olin Rusty Mackinley Mincher
Kyle Matthew Monteith
Anna M. Moore
Elisa Chance Marie Moore
Jessica Cervantes Morales
Anna E. Mumm
Justin S. Murphy
Savannah Jean Nardli
Stephen J. Nardli
Kindra E. Neely
Megan Denise Neff
Julia Irene Neptune
Kevin Van Nguyen
Jared Benjamin Norman
Amie Lynnette Odom
Darby Erin Michael O'Grady
Katelin Marie Osburn
Madison G. Pape
Jennie Parker
Ashli L. Payne
Kevin James Penny
Edgar L. Pérez Silvestre
Aurora Elizabeth Petterson
Kimberly A. Phinney
Chloe Anastasia Quinn
Joshua James Ramm
Katrina Ann Ratledge
Dianna Lynn Risenhoover
Hannah Morgan Roberts
Rheo Antonia Rocco
Marcie Elizabeth Russell
Rebekah K. Schneider
Natalie Sophia Schwartzbauer
Sarah Marie Shinn
Tera Elizabeth Shirley
Matthew Logan Shumway
Cora June Siebert
Brandon D. Slone
David J. Smith
Tammy Marie St Amant
Tiana D Stanley
Ashlee J. Starnes
Myressa Kaye Starnes
Riley Jean Steiz
Cody Glenn Stone
Autumn Dawn Stone
Joede Alyssa Micah Ortega Stonebraker

Christina Lee Terhune
Ian Andrew Thomas
Johnathan Neal Thompson
Weston Lee Tilton
Bryanna Nichole Trevino
Patrick A. Trudeau
Elijah LeBron Trullinger
Brenda Fabiola Valenzuela
Ellie Dominique Van Hattem
Sherri Marie Vike
Sonya Hong Walker
Shalene Wednesday Walton
Kelsey Grace Warren
Davis Randall Weiss
Joseph Aaron Wetzel
Lorenzo A. Wilcox
Maycie L. Williamson
Austin James Windish
Kayla M Winston
Christa Winter Wright
Connor Wade Yegge
Jenny Lynn Zavala

Associate of Science

Quinton Anthony Aramburo
Brady J. Haskett
Joshua E. Mattox
Camren James May
Olin Rusty Mackinley Mincher
Richard John Perry
Cael Markland Telford

Associate of General Studies

Michelle Anne Anderson
Andrea Calvillo
Barbara Ann Causey
Maile Makanalani Chong
Danielle Rae Cramer
Rachel L. Dalziel
Ashley N. Dyer
Kimberly A. Flagor
Douglas Lee Floyd
Darrell Henry Green
Shane Clay Hagberg
Meshayla Cathleen Hagen-Young
Nikol Danielle Hansen
Krystal Marie Heskett
Spencer Mitchell Hordick
Dennis P Hyne
Aron E. Lilly
Stephen J Metsig
John Robert Parker Jr.
Eric Lloyd Percell
Elery Blaine Perry
Rebekah K. Schneider

Samuel Warren Sparks
Daniel Foster Wall
Nathaniel Lawrence Winston

Associate of Applied Science in:

Administrative Assistant

Charline D. Amsbury
Patricia Dawn Bryant

Administrative Medical Assistant

Kasey Leigh Coleman
Bailey N. Lynn
Kathryn Ann Wise

Automotive Technology

Thomas Lee Bailey
Dalton T. Braack
Samuel Everet Brandt
Camrin Tyler Hicks
Theran Alan Hunt
Traci L. Myers
Eric Lloyd Percell
Lori Ann Sappington
Alexander Joseph Young

Business Technology - Entry Management

Darrin Dean Bradfield
Taylor Marie Clyde
Ryan Neill Cook
Julie Anna Cook
Ashley Marie Hampton
Angela R. Hicks
Aysha M. Leatherwood
Georgina N. Pulman-Olzaski
Donald Dean Stratton III

Business Technology Accounting

Caeli Marie Barnhart
Jantyne Koreen Bunce
Rachel K. Ann. Mon...
Lisa M. Cram
Janet A. Rice
Alisha Ortega Sidenstick
Brandy M. Wright

Finishing strong: campus commu

FARRAH KINCHELOE The Mainstream

A few of this year's graduates offer advice to new and returning students about challenges and achievements.

Farrah Kincheloe
AAOT, PR Asst.

What advice would you give to new or returning students?

Never take on more than you know you can handle and ALWAYS ask for help even if you don't think you need it. Exchange numbers with the person who always sits next to you or at least near you in case you were unable to make it to class or you need help on an assignment. Don't forget to set aside some time that is just for you, no homework, no studying, no work, just you. Last thing is to simply enjoy the experience.

What challenges have you overcome in order to graduate this year?

Every person has a different struggle, and I am no different. My struggles were my own; however, I never dealt with them on my own: great friends, family and teachers, tutors (hehe) have helped me get through this past year. There were times I wanted to give up and times that I thought I couldn't keep going. They helped me tread that deep water by coming along side of me and held me up so I wouldn't sink. I can finally see that light at the end of the tunnel. And is it not the brightest thing I ever saw?

Myressa Starnes
AAOT Human Services

What advice would you give to new or returning students?

My biggest advice would be to not to stress on the little things and treat your class work like it is a job. I noticed towards the end of my studies at UCC that stressing out makes it a lot harder to focus on my schoolwork and it actually made it a lot harder for me to get my work done on time and caused me to procrastinate. Procrastinating is never good, especially if you plan to do well in a class. Doing well on exams takes hard work and a lot of time studying, so treat your class work like it is a job. Show up to class every day and on time. Always make sure your homework is turned in on time and, if you can, work on your homework assignments as soon as you get the assignment. Doing this will help you have time later on in the week to study for your exams. Study for all of your exams even if you think you don't need to. Don't cram your studying in the night before or the day of an exam, study as soon as the lecturing begins. This will help you actually maintain the information you are learning. Cramming makes it a lot harder to remember the information and more likely you will forget most of the information while you're taking the test. Most importantly, learn the best note taking and studying techniques that work out the best for you and good luck!

What challenges have you overcome in order to graduate this year?

I am a first generation college student which sometimes makes it hard on me. A lot of the times I feel like I absolutely have to do great in my classes or I would fail my family. Yet other times I felt like it would be okay to quit because no one else in my family is going through what I am going through with school. I also work about 28 hours a week while going to school full time and volunteering at organizations around the Roseburg Area. I began getting so stressed out with it all on top of my bills that I wanted to drop out so many times, even though I had scholarships that paid for all of my tuition. To overcome this feeling of not caring anymore and wanting to drop out, I confided in my family. I called my mom every time I felt this way, and she would talk to me for however long I needed her to. My mom always told me that if I wanted to pursue my passion that I needed to go to school, and that I was so smart that there was no point in losing my dreams over a little stress that would end in a few years. Because of my mom, I am transferring to the University of Oregon for the next two school years, and I will be getting my bachelor's degree.

Tami Hansen
AAOT, Family Law

What advice would you give to new or returning students and what challenges have you faced?

I believe that life is an education and our instructors have spent their lives developing their ability to promote our lives and equip us to carry the torch. Gratitude and grit are the two major factors that have helped me to make it through. Be thankful for each day, and prioritize, persist, and pursue your goals positively. Be sure to ask questions, don't just seek the answers gain the understanding behind the answers. Don't be too embarrassed to seek help; the advisors and the TOP program have been excellent resources to me and I believe are essential components to every student's ability to learn and grow through their college journey. Life is full of challenges. I have struggled this year with a myriad of emotions. After October 1, my life perspective has been altered; my son was in a class next door, the reality that life is fragile has been impressed upon me deeply. I have grappled with my desire to earn an education, but desire to be safe and protect my family. As a result, balancing my family life and putting them first while working hard to gain an education has been an enormous challenge. Being thankful and mindful of the fact that "nothing new is under the sun" gives me an assurance that the things that I fear and am unsure of are opportunities for me to grow and blossom through.

Business Technology Marketing

Miranda Julia Misiti
Tracy J. Placido
Chace Beau Sheldon

Civil Engineering & Surveying

Ricky L. Brammer
Anthony Paul Nolet

Computer Information Systems

Michael Chase Ankeny
Cassie Lin Bauer
John Black
Serafina B. Hall
Benjamin David Hango
Benjamin Kyle Lanegan
Timothy J. Monger
Jarrod M Rice

Criminal Justice/Police Science

Ashley Renae Alliman
Elijah Jaymes Dunnivant
Ashlyn M. Harvey
David R. Kerruish
Sara J. Layman
Megan M. Lymath
Nicholas F. Murtha
Bradley C. O'Dell
Sebastian Dario Terrel-Perez
Christopher A. Vincent

Early Childhood Education

Jennifer Lynn Galster
Ashley M. Morin
Krista Marie Mudrow
Megan Elayne Smith
Nichole Naumi Zamarripa

Electrician Apprenticeship Technologies

Brian L. Cross

Emergency Medical Services-Paramedicine

Dario Antignano
Nicholas G Bacigalupo
Stephen M Beach
Brandon Lee Bowers
Amanda L. Campbell

Lindsey Maye Chitwood
Christopher J. Ewing
Bryan C. Jorgensen
Jenessa Helene Lystrup
Jack Robert McGinnis
Kevin Lonnie McKim

Executive Business Assistant

Myrna L. Brown
Candace N. Gibson

Health Informatics

Christine D. Case
Serafina B. Hall
Daniel E. Rider
Lorraine M. Wheeler

Human Services

Heather Ann Albers
Ruth Ann Clark
Scott Edward Davenport
William Ryan Eifert
Laura Lee Floeck
Terry A. Goldsworthy
Angelene Renee Griffiths
Rebecca Jane Martin
Angela Leigh Mays
Catrina Lynn Miller
Rachelle L. Reed
Jennifer Anne Simon
Katie E. Slone
Roberta Elaine Smith

Medical Office Administration

Tonya Estrada Arroyo
Carolyn F. Barrows
Lisa Ann Carter
Crystal A. Halterman
Chelsea Nichelle Hansen
Jeana Marie Killgore
Debbie Lou Reilly
Samantha J. Rose-Adkins
Andree Ann Shidlovsky
Sarah O. Stamps

Nursing

Keeley Marie Alvarado-Hackett
Michelle LeAnne Bretches
Brittany Ann Brown
Jennie Deen Chrisenbery
Harrison G. Clute

Kimberly Denise Daley
Sylvia Annamarie DeVine
Joel Collins Eckard
Alisha K. Evarts
Steven Forgue
Jennifer Lynn Hollingshead
Cortney Danielle Humbert
Ashley Desiree Kerber
Joseph Kovolisky
Natasha Kress
Maria Rafaela Mendoza Krogh
Megan S. Lawson
Beth A. Linville
Hensel C. Maddock
Joanna Sue Mansanti
James Tyler McCarty
Eden Olivia Miller
Anna M. Moore
Tracey Kay Pe Benito
Nicole Jasmine Velasco Pecheny
Allison Ruith Moeller
Andie Michelle Sewell
Sierra Dawn Smith
Amelia Gloria Snow
Tammy Marie St Amand
Katrina Ann St. Clair
Joede Alyssa Micah Ortega Stonebraker
Ayla Therese Taylor
Karen Michelle Tompkins
Stacey Anne Turner
Darin James Werlinger
Sheri Stinnett Wiley

Paralegal Studies

Sherry L Cooley
Stacie Kathleen Dhone
Maria T. Gomez
Bonnie Sue Hamlett
Teri Hammons
Kasey Ann Levesque
Crystal Dawn Painter
Jocelyn Taylor Harlacher
Aimee Nicole Stark
Patricia Jo Winter

Visual Communications

Kayla R. Towers

Viticulture and Enology

Jonathan James LeBars
Jessica Sue Nelson
Michelle Lynn Shaffer

Welding

Eric Lloyd Percell
Brett M. Smith

Certificates in:

Addiction Studies

Heather Ann Albers
Laura Lee Floeck
Roberta Elaine Smith

Business Technology - WAFC Retail Management

Ryan L. Rushton

Culinary Arts

Jacob T. Beaty
Darrin Dean Bradfield
Douglas Lee Floyd

Dental Assistant

Jessica Rose Baker
Kaitlin Marie Carpenter
Maile Makanalani Chong
Destinee Marie Eisenstein
Shonette Lousie Ernest
Ashley D. Farley
Channelle R. Nelson
Hannah V. Taormina
Tiffany Adriana Ward

Fitness Technician

Braeden Michael Counts
Johnathan Neal Thompson
Daniel Foster Wall

Front Office Medical Assistant

Lisa Ann Carter
Crystal A. Halterman
Chelsea Nichelle Hansen
Andree Ann Shidlovsky

Juvenile Corrections

Ashley Nichole Figueroa
Laura Lee Floeck

Legal Assistant

Maria T. Gomez

Medical Billing & Collections

Lisa Ann Carter
Crystal A. Halterman
Chelsea Nichelle Hansen
Samantha J. Rose-Adkins
Andree Ann Shidlovsky
Curtiss A. Tsai

Office Assistant

Charline D. Amsbury
Candace N. Gibson
Jessica A. McCord
Tara Jo Salazar

Paraeducator

Heather Elizabeth Crittenden

Practical Nurse

Ian James Buckland
Roy Everett Hines

Public Relations Specialist

Abby Ann Dooley
Kimberly A. Phinney

Viticulture

Jonathan James LeBars
Jessica Sue Nelson

Michelle Lynn Shaffer

Welding

Shane Clay Hagberg

Community conquers challenging year

Katrina St. Clair
AS Nursing

What advice would you give to new or returning students?

The best advice I have for any student is never lose sight of what you want, never give up on a dream no matter how far out of reach it seems, and never let anyone or anything change how you see yourself or the goals you want to achieve. It may be a long and hard road, but the things we have to fight the hardest for in life are often the things that mean the most and make us who we are.

What challenges have you overcome in order to graduate this year?

My first year I was unsure how I would pay for school and still be able to cover the cost of daily living, but I found a couple of part time jobs and made things work, I took some classes online to free more time for work Second challenge was completing all of the necessary credits; my counselor told me I needed too many credits to complete them in one year, at least successfully. Well, I proved him wrong. I took more credits each term than most people would consider, I was dedicated to what I knew I needed to do, I gave up a lot of social and family time and I studied.

Finally, my biggest challenge was accepting the fact I have a disability and asking for help. October 2015 changed the lives of many people including myself. It was a very emotional time and it exacerbated my PTSD. In a time when people should have come together and been supportive, some people gave me a hard time because of my disability and the side effects it had on my life. I was made to feel like less of a person and I was even told I did not belong in nursing because of my "mental disorder" (PTSD), but I sought out help through a psychologist and opened up to people who also live with PTSD. I talked with Disability Services, and they offered support/help through accommodations.

Graciela Garcia
AAOT, Applied Mathematics

What advice would you give to new or returning students?

Keep up to date on homework and things, but leave time for fun stuff. Never overwork yourself if you can avoid it. Ask for help when you need it! There are countless nice people on campus who are always willing to lend a hand.

What challenges have you overcome in order to graduate this year?

Sleep deprivation . . . still haven't overcome that one yet . . . but this past fall was definitely an obstacle for the entire campus. I'm thankful that I wasn't as involved as others so I could help those who were overcome with stress and anxiety that resulted from the event. I think, as a whole, the campus was able to unite and help each other recover from the losses we experienced that day, and I'm proud to be a part of that effort.

Kayla Towers
AAS, Visual Communications

What advice would you give to new or returning students?

If you're going to be an art major, you need to have a portfolio to carry your work in. you don't want to get caught in the rain with a charcoal drawing. It probably won't be pretty. But who knows, maybe the rain can make it beautiful.

What challenges have you overcome in order to graduate this year?

My biggest challenge was getting a degree after my program was cut. When the Visual Communications program was cut, many students changed schools or majors, but I stayed to see it through. And while this can be fun at times, it can be challenging to not be inspired by other students' comments and projects. I owe my teachers a million thanks because they worked so hard to help me, and I couldn't be more grateful.

Joshua Friedlein
ASUCC Vice President

Advice from ASUCC Vice President

"For me, commencement represents the finish line. It's the end of an all-out-sprint that I've been in, and while it has appeared in the past there was little to no hope, I can see the light at the end of the tunnel. Commencement represents success and triumph. I'm honored to graduate from UCC, and I will never forget the memories that I have made here." •

Moving on

Remembering the year's triumphs and traumas

"When I was a boy and I would see scary things in the news, my mother would say to me, 'Look for the helpers. You will always find people who are helping.'"
- Fred Rogers

Provided by Art Lucero

The Mainstream staff members, in clockwise order: Kayla Towers, Trick Schneider, Casey Conemac, Farrah Kincheloe, Haylie Ellison, adviser Melinda Benton, Alicia Graves, Kimberly Phinney, Brandon Taylor, Vladimir Sovyak and Vaughn Kness.

VAUGHN KNESS The Mainstream

As I write this final article as a student reporter, my page is empty, but somehow so full of reflection. The words, yet to be laid down, repeatedly turn over in my head. Writing is always drawn from insight and capability, but during times like these, words are a writer's soul made with letters.

That's what makes writing difficult. To look back on and fathom the journey from fall term's tragedy to graduation is to pierce a scar. This is the last I will write on the subject and my last article for The Mainstream in general. That is tough to comprehend, difficult to agree with, but, above all, sad to consider.

The Mainstream paper has been the outlet of my emotion, my catharsis for the past. Without it, well, I doubt much healing would ever have occurred within me. Now, I can see that hated October day more clearly without being stricken by the knowledge that it happened, that my school was forever changed in the stroke of minutes. That day exists, we here wrote on it, we led a movement for information and progress, but we also have since begun to cauterize our wounds.

Words are a relief and have been the biggest detractor of pain for many. Whether we journal in private or speak to a counselor or friend, words are freedom from the negative emotions that weigh us down. No, the pain does not subside completely following a period of writing or a conversation, but none of us are the worse for expressing.

Research by Dr. James W. Pennebaker, of the University of Texas, Austin, shows that expressive writing (writing about trauma) has helped college students reduce pain medication and visits to health centers. Research done at the University of Chicago has found that students who write about their feelings and ideas before an exam score higher grades. That made The Mainstream my best outlet for emotional exercising. Although we here had to cover the events, and in the process perpetually reopen our closing wounds, in a way our goal was to heal long term. Every word tore a new gap in the heart, but it was through these gaps that our fury and pain was released and purged. However, freedom from trauma is never a straightforward path. "Recovery does not necessarily mean complete freedom from post-traumatic affects. Recovery is an individual experience and will be and look different for everyone. In general recovery is the ability to live in the present without being overwhelmed by the thoughts and feelings of the past," the Manitoba Trauma Information & Education Centre explains.

Therapy helped others. Speaking to a counselor is just as much a conscious decision to heal as it is a series of psychological discussions. Trauma cannot sustain itself when feeding on live words; instead, it slowly decomposes until nothing but sadness is left or anger that it controlled you for so long.

Healing also comes through community support, and the community we experienced this year was exceptional. When the campus first reopened, a plethora of hugs, kind words and true empathy were given by everyone. Simple acts of kindness like the ones given those first few days were the base foundation for the campus's healing. A hug given by a stranger had a rippling effect like a leaf atop still water.

Something deeply human was reflected in these interactions, as if all that was vile at the time morphed into an understanding that most people genuinely care for others.

The Roseburg community, and Douglas County as a whole, actively helped to enliven UCC's spirit. Signs promising prayer and well-wishes, citizens rallying around us, the supporters lining College Road to welcome us back, the donors who continue to provide aid, they all still amaze me. Every day I see a "UCC Strong" sticker in someone's rear window or see someone wearing a shirt with a message of solidarity. It is a small gesture, but a new world of hope forms from knowing that others care.

"Simple acts of kindness like the ones given those first few days were the base foundation for the campus's healing. A hug given by a stranger had a rippling effect like a leaf atop still water."

-Vaughn Kness

The embrace of our troubles spread farther than the reaches of Douglas County, too. The recovery dogs that came to campus were another simple gesture, but their effect is beyond description. Even if one student felt comforted in the embrace of the animals, and that helped them inch closer to normalcy, then their impact could never be understated.

Professors and students of the University of Oregon — once unknowns, now friends — supplied us with camera equipment and other commodities. And while I appreciate that to this day, what was better were their words of acknowledgment and support. The biggest school in Oregon cared for us, genuinely, and suddenly that imposing place and those imposing people were human.

Where I have seen the greatest impact, however, is among the UCC staff and student body. On Oct. 1, the UCC I knew disappeared, replaced with a residence of trepidation and grief. There were questions from us all on whether we would return to a place that reminded us of the greatest harm we had ever witnessed. The school and its denizens could have crumbled beneath the negative concept of their school, but they instead relied on the history and emotion of its previous 51 years as an educational establishment and returned. Without that struggle, growth would never have happened. People here have changed in a slow yet steady evolution, a process that should have been decades in the making, but took only a few months.

I changed. For a time, the world was a bit less purposeful, a bit less comedic, and I was at its center, frozen. Maybe that is a bit too much to say, but certainly my old way of living is gone.

Life has evolved. There are times when I look at this vast, beautiful campus or admire the river that saws the land around us down, and things are clarified. These were all here before, and tragedy did not burn the land or wilt the water. The world is not destined to be hated or pitied; what we first feel in ourselves we see in it, and only then does it change.

Melancholy is not the destiny of my world. I decided that after much deliberation and anxiety. Of course, I had my own heroes who helped me create that perception, and I call them that knowing their actions were not worthy of a Hollywood blockbuster or even a newspaper profile, but they affected me to seek change.

All it took were some words or a simple gesture. The actions seem so remedial, as if their simplicity makes them unworthy; there is nothing further from the truth. My mother, Tara Kness, and the rest of my family supported my endeavors, gave me counsel and never believed Oct. 1 was the end. My girlfriend, Jenica Lamoreaux, stayed by my side and helped prop me up while I did the same for her. And, of course, I was helped by The Mainstream staff, whom I've lived with and consider family, including adviser Melinda Benton, who has looked over and nurtured my writing to a respectable quality, Alicia Graves, who took over the role of editor and has kept this newspaper above ground, and the rest of the staff, my friends, whom I could speak freely with in a wide range of matters from the shooting to more lighthearted topics like the newest movies coming out. Without them, and without writing, I would not be the same man I am now.

Words are not enough to describe the change in me this year has brought, but they were enough to affect it. People have influenced me, and the bravery of each individual student and staff member who returned to UCC after Oct. 1 has inspired me. I hope, one day, that the school can look back on Oct. 1 and not see the tragedy that befell it, but instead see the long path of recovery and growth it excelled in. UCC deserves to be more than a memory of pain; it deserves to be known as the place that defeated it. •

Graduation Committee plans commencement ceremony

BRANDON TAYLOR
The Mainstream

The Graduation Committee was one of six committees assigned to help with recovery after the Oct. 1 shooting. One of the goals of the committee was to ensure that this year's commencement ceremony was the same as previous years, explained committee member Anne Marie Levis, UCC's public information officer.

However, this year will feature high profile speakers in Gov. Kate Brown and Douglas County Sheriff John Hanlin.

About 1,500 to 1,800 people are expected to attend the commencement ceremony Friday, June 10 at the Swanson Amphitheater. Graduation packets said that 1,000 seats will be available with blanket seating on the sides.

Media companies from Portland and Eugene as well as local media companies are expected to appear. "I don't see this as being a huge big media presence, but it could be. The governor tends to attract more attention," Levis said. According to Levis, there will be an area designated for media companies that is not obtrusive and is respectful.

Having Sheriff Hanlin as a speaker is the result of a student survey. The survey had other high profile speaker options such as Alek Skarlatos, the Roseburg High School graduate who aided in stopping the Thalys train attack in 2015, and Second Lady Jill Biden. Although Skarlatos won the majority vote, circumstances led the group to Hanlin instead, according to ASUCC Vice President Joshua Friedlein.

There are some concerns among students that having Sheriff Hanlin as a speaker may trigger thoughts and stress associated with the Oct. 1 shooting. "Anything I would say to try and alleviate it doesn't give credence to that feeling, and I want to honor that feeling," Levis said, "I think the wonderful thing about having him is that he is a UCC graduate so the nice part of it is that he has real ties here." Hanlin will be in a dress uniform, which is different from his regular uniform, and has been given some talking points to consider for his speech. The committee wants the commencement ceremony to be focused on the graduates, and a moment of silence will be the only real nod towards the shooting.

Gov. Brown contacted the

Brandon Taylor/ Mainstream

The ceremony will be at the Swanson Amphitheater.

college and asked if she could come. Brown spoke at the vigil on the first night after the shooting and was at UCC on the first day classes resumed. "She had a huge part in making it a priority that the funding got to Umpqua Community College out of the short session, so she has very, very fond and close feelings for this campus," Levis said, "I think it's quite nice that she has us as a priority, and thought enough of us to come here."

Tickets are not required to attend commencement, however commemorative tickets and pins will be distributed.

"I hope that commencement is about honoring and celebrating the people who have worked so hard to get here," Levis said.

HAYLIE ELLISON
The Mainstream

Robynne Wilgus, Executive Assistant to the President and Board

Q: What is the greatest challenge you overcame this year?

A: The escalated work pace in response to Oct. 1.

Q: What helped you overcome it?

A: I was always taught to persevere; this time it was extremely difficult, but it kept me moving forward. My faith in and relationship with God was the overarching support in making it through the day of Oct. 1 and the ensuing workload.

Q: Who specifically helped you make it through this school year?

A: Co-workers and my husband

Q: What types of help did they provide?

A: Having supportive co-workers in the midst of such tragic circumstances provided strength and understanding to continue going; we were "walking the road" together. My husband was amazing in providing me multiple opportunities to process. Especially at winter break, he went the extra mile, literally, in taking me back to my hometown, and letting me soak in the beauty and memories. He gave me time.

Q: What advice would you give students about how to finish difficult tasks like their education?

A: Recognize it won't be easy – give yourself permission to say this is too hard for me, but then begin moving forward. Have a trustworthy person to be a "sounding board" for processing the challenge. Find time to renew your soul. Rely upon the teachings of your faith.

Caroline Randall, TRiO/SSS Director

Q: What helped you overcome the challenges you faced this year?

A: I have a lot of very close friends with strong bonds and my ability to reach out to them on a daily basis and just have somebody to talk to helped me get through this year.

Q: Who specifically helped you make it through this school year?

A: Two of my colleagues, all of my students and my pseudo mother specifically helped me through this year.

Q: What types of help did they provide?

A: They provided me with love, support, laughter and reflection.

Q: What advice would you give students about how to finish difficult tasks like their education?

A: I would encourage students to somehow have a visualization of their end goal somewhere where they can see it every day and spend some time every morning thinking about the tasks ahead, how they connect to the end goal, and thinking about all the positive effects pushing through and completing the task will bring them. They also need to understand that the benefits and profits from their endeavors reach far beyond their degree and that they can't possibly understand yet what those may be. Each opportunity seized opens a door to so many more.

Toni Clough, Associate Professor, Business

Q: What is the greatest challenge you overcame this year?

A: With Oct. 1, being able to be a strong person for students who needed me afterwards and how to try and get everything back to normal as much as possible but yet be available to those who needed to talk about it.

Q: What advice would you give students to finish the school year strong?

A: To stick with it no matter what gets in your way. If you really want that goal, don't let anyone else tell you otherwise. Don't let them tell you that you can't do something.

ASUCC vote results

Students at UCC voted for two ASUCC officers and 26 constitutional amendments that will go into effect in 2016/2017.

All amendments passed with 78 percent or greater majority vote. A breakdown of the proposed changes to the constitution can be found here: <http://newsite.mainstreamonline.org/asucc-proposes-constitutional-amendments/>

The following officers were elected for the 2016/2017 school year.

President: Alexandra Lape

Public Relations Officer: Patrick Schneider

Vice President: No candidate filed

Business Manager: No candidate filed

Activities Officer: No candidate filed

Outstanding Students

Criminal Justice
Ashley Alliman

Biological Sciences
Alexandra Lape

Library
Jordan Anderson

Auto Technology
Dan Loomis

TOP Small Groups
Rebecca Attaway

Engineering Transfer second year
Madison Martin

Mens Basketball
Mikko Balmes

Practical Nursing
Tawnya Masters

Viticulture and Enology
Jessie Bernardino

Nursing first year
Leanya Maxfield

Literature
Jason Buier

Calculus first year
Jonathan McHenry

Calculus first year
Robert Cline

Volleyball
Kortney Moore

Human Services
Trinity Coulombe

Theater
Rebecca Miles

Speech Communication
Charles Crosier

Fine Art
Kindra Neely

Welding first year
Aaron Davis

Viticulture and Enology
Jessica Nelson

Welding second year
Anthony DeCamp

Chemical Sciences
Kevin Nguyen

Calculus, first year;
World History
Joel Dowdy

Water Quality Technology
Anthony Nolet

Welding first year
Mitchell Eibel

Public Relations
Kimberly Phinney

TOP Graduate
Chloe Elliott

Management and Entrepreneurship
Georgina Pulman-Olzaski

Dental Assisting
Ashley Farley

Spanish
Katrina Ratledge

TOP Experience Cohort first year
Roy Fenn

Communications Leadership
Patrick Schneider

Fine Art
Emily Ferguson

Marketing and Entrepreneurship
Dan Shepherd

U.S. Government
Linda Freeman

Geology
Cora Siebert

Calculus second year
Graciela Garcia

Viticulture and Enology
Janelle Skeen

Music
Madeline Gidcumb

Technical Writing; Engineering
Michael Smith

Journalism
Alicia Graves

Nursing first year
Nate Stallings

History of the U.S.
James Gugel

Psychology
Kristen Sterner

Engineering Transfer first year
Michael Hoie

Music Studies
Tristin Thomas

TOP Experience Cohort first year
Alicia Jones

Human Services
Byronna Thomas

Women's Basketball
Sawyer Kluge

Math for Elementary Education
Sherri Vike

Journalism
Vaughn Kness

Welding second year
Tanner Voelker

Nursing second year
Natasha Kress

Nursing second year
Anne Wright

Biological Sciences
Jake Lacosse

Media Circus:

The News-Review photographer details his Oct. 1 campus coverage

ALICIA GRAVES
The Mainstream

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series about how UCC's school shooting was covered in local media. This piece focuses on photography and photojournalist Michael Sullivan of The News-Review.

Susan Sontag, author and filmmaker, once said, "All photographs are memento mori. To take a photograph is to participate in another person's (or thing's) mortality, vulnerability, mutability. Precisely by slicing out this moment and freezing it, all photographs testify to time's relentless melt."

In the media arena, photojournalists are storytellers in their own right, conveying emotion, freezing moments in history that may last for centuries. As they capture events and situations one picture at a time, nothing seems hidden, as many celebrities can attest to.

When the media circus came to town Oct. 1, the day of the school shooting, the community was not only inundated with reporters and their microphones, but also with photographers and their cameras. The images that came from that month are still burned into our minds, and questions are still being raised as to why some of these photos were published. After I saw the images of campus on Oct. 1, I shut down and stayed away from media for days even though I'm a journalist.

Pictures are indeed worth a thousand words. Our emotional reaction to images is almost instantaneous while words create a more delayed response. Recently, E.A. Holmes and A. Mathews at the University of Oxford confirmed "that imagery does indeed evoke greater emotional responses than verbal representation."

Photographer Michael Sullivan, who works for the local newspaper The News-Review, provided many of the unforgettable images of Oct. 1 that accompanied stories by reporters Ian Campbell and Troy Byrneson. "I feel I have the same responsibilities and objectives as the writers in the newsroom," Sullivan said. "We may work with different tools, but we're both trying to tell the story of what happened at any given event."

That story was so traumatic that it raised many questions and emotions regarding reporting of trauma, but do we stop to think how things looked through the eyes of those who captured the images? Have we considered what history would be like without the iconic images from D-Day that froze those moments of triumph and loss? What about the other visuals backing historical events? For example, we still associate Tiananmen Square with the photograph of the student in front of the tanks, and we continue to be touched by the romanticism of returning soldiers thanks to Eisenstaedt's captured WWII moment of the American sailor kissing a woman in Times Square.

We connect with those pieces of history, with the people captured in those moments of time, because photographers create a human bond that we feel.

In order to create that bond, photojournalists often put themselves into the middle of chaos, grabbing onto images to tell their audiences what is happening and who is affected. As Sullivan explained, "I'm looking for something genuine, something that might, in one frame, tell the story."

One of Sullivan's rules for photojournalism is to avoid juxtaposing his interpretation onto a scene he is photographing. "I don't want to arrive at a scene, breaking news or otherwise, with a preconceived notion, or looking to push some sort of personal vision or agenda," he said. "Overall I strive to be accurate and comprehensive. I'm not taking pictures for myself. I feel the responsibility to be the eyes of the readers who aren't on the scene."

When he comes to a difficult photo shoot, Sullivan tries to remain calm and remember that his purpose is to create a photographic record. He also advises, however, "show up every day prepared to work and learn. It's important to understand that each day and each assignment is an opportunity to learn and to grow."

And Sullivan does not work alone: "We ran a photograph of an individual lying on a gurney being moved by on the front page of that day's edition [Oct. 1]. In the newsroom, our publisher, several editors, our page designers and I discussed whether or not it was the right image to run. It was an accurate photo that immediately conveyed the severity and tragedy of the story. That's why we selected it."

Photo provided by Michael Sullivan/ The News-Review

A heartbroken community sought comfort during a candlelight vigil Oct. 1 at Stewart Park. The photograph is part of UCC's historical record.

The Mainstream asked Sullivan to explain his Oct. 1 experiences as he photographed UCC's school shooting for the local media. He provided the following information by email.

Michael Sullivan's Story

"I was finishing a photo assignment in Garden Valley (approximately eight miles from UCC) when I got a call from the office to head over to UCC to look into a scanner report of a live shooter incident on campus. The second I hung up, I heard several sirens from first responders rushing to the school. I hurried to UCC.

"As I pulled up to the intersection for the road leading to the school, I saw a police officer directing traffic. He wasn't letting anyone (other than first responders) drive up to the campus. But I saw a couple people walking the road to the school. I parked on the shoulder and met up with The News-Review reporter Ian Campbell who pulled in just behind me. We jogged the road to the campus. Fire vehicles, law enforcement and ambulances were flying by in both directions.

"Arriving on the scene, the first responder presence was incredible. Vehicles from all agencies were represented. Police tape had been set up. There were several columns of people lined up, being searched by police as the school was being evacuated. If I remember correctly, that was the first image I made on the scene, a student standing by as a police officer checked her bag.

"Once cleared, people were gathering in large groups on the front lawn section of the school. The mood was extremely tense but not chaotic. A lot of questions and confusion. People trying to figure out exactly what was happening. I don't think the campus had been completely secured at that point as a tactical police squad showed up and started going from room to room in tight formation. I didn't know it at the time, but at this point the worst was over, and the shooter was dead.

"The News-Review is an afternoon paper and I was on deadline to get the photos in for that day's edition. I made images on campus for as long as I could."

As long as the images of that event linger in our minds, the impact is still felt. This remains true for Sullivan, as well.

"It's been over six months, but I think on some level I'm still processing that day and the days after. I know it's changed me but not in a way that I can articulate right now," Sullivan concluded.

Whether we are a photographer, reporter, student, teacher or community member, it is my belief that many of us agree. We are all testifying "to time's relentless melt."

In Memorium:

Quinn Glen Cooper
Kim Saltmarsh Dietz
Lucas Eibel
Jason Dale Johnson
Lawrence (Larry) Levine
Sarena Dawn Moore
Treven Taylor Anspach
Rebecka Ann Carnes
Lucero Alcaraz

To all the inspiring and amazing people in class, on campus and throughout the community, thank you for helping us conquer a challenging school year. Thank you for your support and encouragement. We recognize the uniqueness and celebrate the triumph of each student who finished this school year. You are outstanding!